

Scaling Laws for Foundation Models in Scientific Discovery

Alice Smith¹, Bob Jones², Carol Wu¹, Dan Brown³, Eva Novak[·], Frank Lee[·], Grace Kim¹

Abstract

We present a novel approach combining attention mechanisms with graph neural networks for improved molecular property prediction. Experiments on standard benchmarks demonstrate state-of-the-art performance across multiple datasets.

1 Introduction

Deep learning has transformed many areas of scientific computing. In this paper we propose a unified framework that addresses key limitations of prior work. Our contributions are: (1) a novel architecture, (2) improved training procedure, (3) comprehensive benchmarks.

¹ MIT CSAIL, Cambridge MA 02139, USA {alice, carol, grace}@mit.edu

² Stanford University, Stanford CA 94305, USA bjones@stanford.edu

³ Carnegie Mellon University, Pittsburgh PA 15213, USA dbrown@cs.cmu.edu

· Max Planck Institute, Tübingen, Germany e.novak@tuebingen.mpg.de

· University of Edinburgh, UK frank.lee@ed.ac.uk